

MARY C. MARX'S BEQUESTS.

LEAVING THE BULK OF HER INCOME TO AN ENGLISH PREACHER.

Following him from the Protestant into the Catholic Church—A Tour With him in the Old World—Her Sister Contesting the Will.

Mary Caroline Marx died on July 9, 1878, leaving an estate that yielded an annual income of $15,000. Her will, dated May 23, 1878, gave her to sister, Catherine Henriette Marx, $1,000 a year and the use of her house at 122 East Fortieth street; and to the Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn $1,000. The income from the rest of her property was left to the Rev. Augustus J. D. Bradley, who directed that the rest of the property should be given to the Roman Catholic Little Sisters of the Poor in New York.

Catherine H. Marx, her sister, contests the will, alleging that the testatrix was unduly influenced by Mr. Bradley. The execution of the will was proved last summer, and Edward F. Underhill was appointed referee to take the testimony. The testimony was taken during the recess of the court, and the summing up of the case was begun yesterday, before Surrogate Calvin. Elihu T. Gerry appeared for the contestant. He read most of the testimony, and many of Miss Marx's letters and extracts from her diaries, which were in evidence. The trial told by the testimony is as follows:

In 1865 Mary Caroline Marx and her sister were communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church. They attended St. Albans' Church in this city. The Rev. C. W. Morrill was the rector, and that Rev. Mr. Walter R. Noyes his assistant. Mr. Bradley had been a member of the church, and had been a frequent visitor there. In 1869, Mr. Bradley came to New York. He had been an assistant curate of St. Barnabas' Church in Brooklyn. He had been a frequent visitor to St. Albans' Church. His income from that source was $100 a year. Soon after his arrival in New York he was licensed to preach by Bishop Potter. He became intimate with the Rev. Mr. Noyes. Through Mr. Noyes he became acquainted with Mary Caroline Marx and her husband, Mr. Schneiders, who had been well pleased with them. Mr. Bradley's visits became frequent, and a month or two after the acquaintance was formed, he told Mr. Noyes on the point that he intended to establish a mission for vagrants on the east side of New York. In December, 1869, he returned to England without his wife.

At that time Miss Marx was in love with the Rev. Mr. Noyes, one entry in her diary reading, "I would willingly lay down my life for him." She had been born in England in May, 1871, and at once renewed her acquaintance with Miss Marx. They visited many places together, and she became a member of the 18th Street Broadway. Miss Marx authorizing $500 toward its support. It was named the Oratory of St. Sacramento. Soon afterward Miss Marx and her husband moved to Brooklyn, and its housekeeper. She accompanied Mr. Bradley when the oratory was removed to West Forty-third street. In January, 1872, Mr. Bradley, while on a vacation, was converted and was received into the Roman Catholic Church by the Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn. Two weeks afterward Miss Marx and her husband became Catholics. Mr. Bradley standing as her godfather. In June, 1872, Miss Marx went to Europe. Mr. Bradley accompanied her. She remained there until 1878. Mr. Bradley, with her almost constantly during her stay. She visited the home of his parents in England, and to wash and iron and assist in the kitchen. Inquire for two days at 261 4th av.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

Mr. Williams, a very nervous, and Officer Charles Knight, who was in constant attendance upon them, entered the District Attorney's office. He carried the minute book of the Grand Jury, and took his seat. Mr. Williams had the privilege of reading the minutes, so that he may follow out any instructions therein to the District Attorney or Foreman. Mr. Williams was then called into the office of the Rev. Dr. McGlynn. He will conclude his argument on Thursday.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

Capt. Williams entered the District Attorney's office yesterday morning and, throwing himself into the easiest chair that he could find, began to talk boastfully of the proceedings before the Grand Jury in the case of Policeman Fleming and himself. At length he walked up stairs to the Grand Jury room. Detectives Schmittberger and Price had preceded him, and were "shadowing" Mr. Samuel Whitechurch and Mr. T. P. Donlon, a witness of the clubbing of Charles W. Smith. Mr. Donlon was called into the private room of the Grand Jury, and Williams returned, evidently uneasy, to his seat within the railing in the District Attorney's office.

At about 12½ o'clock Mr. Whitechurch was told that Judge Cowing was about to adjourn the Grand Sessions for the day. The two hurried into the General Sessions Chamber, remanded Judge Cowing that if the court adjourned before the Grand Jury disposed of the case of Williams and Fleming, they could be held over to the next day. Mr. Foreman and Foreman Starr said that the Grand Jury had not finished their business, and would be pleased if Judge Cowing would adjourn the court until to-day.

The Judge thereupon directed the usher to adjourn the court until to-day.

WILLIAMS TO BE TRIED,
First before the Police Board and Next in
the Court of General Sessions.

<p